Standard Hardware:

Each Collection has specific "Standard" hardware selected for that collection. Holes are drilled in the doors and drawers specifically to match this hardware. There is no extra charge for the hardware.

To Change Your Hardware Choice:

If you prefer a different hardware than the "Standard" for the collection you are ordering you must tell us at the time you place the order. As a free service to you, we will change the cabinet to a different hardware style and as needed, change the drilling pattern to match (an exception is the three longest Stainless Steel Bar Pulls). To order non-standard hardware, you must specify both the knob and drawer codes using our Hardware Style Codes.

Hardware Style Codes:

The Hardware Style Code (only used if you are changing the standard hardware) is a 4-position code. The first code is the Door code and the second code is the Drawer code. For example: If you are ordering a Gentry Collection cabinet which has the "GKSN" knob for the door and the "GPSN" pull for the drawers, but you want the "AKSN" knob on both doors and drawers, then you would tell us to replace the standard hardware with hardware AKSN-AKSN.

Optional Stainless Steel Bar Pulls:

If you want to order a cabinet with any of the optional bar pulls (codes that begin with 7, 8 or 9) you must specify "No holes drilled and no hardware" and then order the specific hardware you need. You will be charged the Add-on Price less normal discounts for pulls with the codes 7PSS, 8PSS, and 9PSS.

No Holes Drilled and No Hardware Option:

If you want to use "Non-Woodpro" hardware or when ordering optional stainless steel bar pull hardware (codes 7PSS, 8PSS, or 9PSS) then you must order the cabinet(s) with the option, "No holes drilled and no hardware". There is no charge for this option.

Hardware Pricing:

If you want to order additional hardware items or replacement items then you will be charged the Replacement Price, listed above, less normal discounts.

NOTE: Light fittings of mirrored cabinets are automatically finished the color specified for each Collection. Polished nickel hardware is matched with chrome light fittings. If you change the hardware choice to a different finish, it is your responsibility to order a different light fittings finish to match.

The Beauty and Nature of Wood

Variation in grain and color creates the beauty of real hardwood. Quality wood finishes highlight the unusual graining and color patterns. After hardwoods are finished they are affected by exposure to light as well as changes in temperature and humidity. That's why new cabinets will never be the same color as an aged sample or bathroom display. Some people find natural variety distasteful, but most welcome it as the reason they chose real wood instead of an imitation wood grain or plastic. Paint finishes keep their color. Light stains show the color variations most clearly—but the color will change. Wood “mellows” as it ages, often darkening significantly as it expands and contracts over the seasons of the year. Some species of wood darken more than others.

Wood naturally expands and contracts which can result in hairline cracks appearing at the finish surface joints of the cabinet frame, door and drawer fronts. Despite hairline cracks the joint remains strong. When the wood contracts due to a change to low humidity in the home or bathroom, it is natural that joints around the center door panel can become more visible.

Cherry

Cherry Golden

Cherry is an old favorite that finishes to a glass-like finish with textured accents provided by small knots, irregular black streaks or pits. Lighter stains show off this variation, including natural dark streaks more than four inches long. The white, cream, pink, mahogany and reddish brown colors tend to become richer and deeper with age. Medium toned stains will moderate some of this natural change, but sharp eyes will still see the wood age. Darker stains completely mask the color change, but the dark surface highlights the texture of Cherry's gum lines and pits, which once carried nutrients throughout the tree. The surface texturing can be more than a quarter of an inch wide and run the entire length of a piece of wood.

Cherry Rustic

Cherry Rustic Golden

Cherry Rustic is an old favorite that finishes to a glass-like finish with textured accents provided by knots, irregular black streaks, and pits. Expect the rustic character of larger knots, open knots, gum lines, pitch pockets, pits, surface splits, dark mineral streaks and worm holes to appear unpredictably throughout to emphasize the natural beauty of the wood. When glaze is applied expect these rustic characteristics to become much more obvious. Lighter stains show off this variation, including natural dark streaks more than four inches long and some sap wood. The white, cream, pink, mahogany, and reddish brown colors tend to become richer and deeper with age. Medium toned stains will moderate some of this natural change, but sharp eyes will still see the wood age. Darker stains completely mask the color change, but the dark surface highlights the texture of Cherry Rustic. The amount of character will vary for each door and drawer front making each cabinet unique.

Maple

Maple Golden

Maple possesses warm color and a strong closed grain, which may display vine marks and “bird's eye”. Occasionally, a wave-like grain called “flame” maple graces a cabinet: it is prized by makers of guitars and violins for its strength. Dark streaks of black and burnt umber complement the creams, tans and rich browns of the long-time favorite. Lighter finishes show off the contrasting colors and grain characteristics, while darker finishes provide a mellow, traditional finish. Paint disguises the color, but certain grain characteristics add texture to the sheen. As with all paints, cracks will appear at joints of the doors, drawers and cabinet frame as the wood expands and contracts throughout the year.

Oak

Oak Golden

Red Oak creates fine American furniture that adds quiet strength to your home. Smooth, luminous rays run throughout the wood and complement the open grain, providing abundantly textured cabinetry in shades of pink, tan, and white, with touches of green, brown and black. Natural finish and Golden stain highlight the red and pink tones in the wood, while darker stains transform Oak into warm shades of brown. Paint disguises the color, but highlights the open grain - especially when the discerning owner chooses a Glaze combination. As with all paints, cracks will appear at joints of the doors, drawers and cabinet frame as the wood expands and contracts throughout the year.
